

Predator Banshee

The Midnight's Spectres Space Marine Chapter is credited with the created the Predator Banshee as an infantry support tank. It is believed the tank is a redesign based on the Spectres rejection of the "Baal" pattern predator as an ineffective design. It is also believed that the Banshee is the basis of the Lemman Russ Exterminator variant (although some critics state the opposite is likely true). The variant is named the Banshee due to its high pitched howl when firing all its main armament. The rear mounted finned turret provides for additional recoil compensation using the weight of the tank to balance out the punishing lurching of the turret. While the Midnight's Spectres actively promote the Banshee as an improved design, it has not widely caught on and very few other chapters have ever been seen fielding them in battle.

Predator Banshee
	Points	BS	Armor
			front	side	rear
Banshee	150	4	13	12	10

Substitution: A Predator Banshee can be taken anywhere that a predator Destructor may be taken Except chapters other than the Midnight's Spectres are limited to 0-1 Banshees and the Blood Angels and their successors may not take it at all..

Type: Tracked, Normal

Crew: 2 Space Marine

Transport: None

Fire Points: None

Access Points: None

Options: The Predator Banshee may take any upgrades available to the predator destructor.

Weapons:

Assault Cannon

Twin Linked Autocannon

2x Sponson Heavy Bolters

Modeling: The Model is an old style predator destructor. The turret was reversed and the other guns and fins molded on from brass rod, sheet styrene and modeling clay.